YANK PRISONERS ARE NOW WELL CARED FOR

American Red Cross Doing Splendid Work in Sending Food to Prison Camps.

American wives, mothers and loved ones of captured Yankees confined in German prison camps need have no fear their boys will suffer from lack of food. With characteristic live-wire, modern business efficiency methods the American Red Cross has perfected a great organization which now forwards weekly supplies of food to all American prisoners in Germany through Bern, Switzerland.

At Bern the Red Cross has leased a large warehouse which now contains sufficient food to supply 10,000 American prisoners for a period of six months. A similar warehouse has been leased in Copenhagen, which will be ready to take up the work of prisoners' relief at a moment's notice.

As soon as a man is reported a prisoner of war a 20-pound parcel of food is sent to him, and this is followed by a shipment of the same size each week thereafter, the parcel containing also a supply of suitable clothing, toilet articles, tobacco and certain luxuries. The American war department has furnished clothing for the enlisted men, and the Red Cross has a tailor shop at Bern to provide officers' uniforms.

A typical individual weekly package sent to a Yankee prisoner of war includes the following articles:

Two pounds corned beef, one pound roast beef, two pounds salmon, two pounds corned beef hash, two pounds pork and beans, one pound dried beans, two pounds tomatoes, corn and peas, five pounds hard bread and biscuits, one pound granulated sugar, one pound prunes, one bar soap, salt and pepper, cocoa, jam, raisins or figs, chocolate and one hundred cigarettes.

A special invalid's ration approved by the United States army surgeon general is issued to prisoners reported ill.

Mystery Explained.

"What's become of your old friend the sea serpent?" asked a vacationer at the beach. "Has he been frightened off by the submarines?"

"Guess not," returned the hotel manager. "I rather think he's sore over our treatment of him. Last time he was here we chased him off the coast. You see, he caused so many men to sign the pledge that he was killing our bar business."—Boston Evening Transcript.

Far From the Farm.

An Iowa boy on board a transport was lying in his bunk, when a friend, who had been up on deck, rushed down and said:

"Now, come up quick. There's a great flock of seabirds circling 'round the ship."

"O, gwan," answered the homesick farmer, "who cares about birds? I'd rather see a flock of corn cubs than anything else just now."

No Comparison.

"I'll tell you, doctor," said the prospective victim with a note of cold feet in his voice, "I am getting a little scared about my operation. What if I don't pull through it?"

"Oh, nonsense," exclaimed Doc, in his hearty, reassuring way. "What have you to lose in comparison to me? If you die you won't know it, but think what it will do to my reputation."

Shrub Yields Valuable Wax.

In Mexico there grows a wild shrub named "candelillo," the stems of which yield from 3 to 5 per cent of a fine hard wax suitable for coating phonograph cylinders. It grows in semi-desert regions.

Great London Thoroughfare.

Cheapside, the central, east-and-west thoroughfare of the city of London, was originally a large open common in the course of Watling street, where the markets and public assemblies were held. Different kinds of wares were sold separately, and the names were perpetuated in the streets which were built up where the old booths had stood. In the Middle Ages Chepe was the great street of the retail trade. It was built with the finest houses in the city, and well supplied with churches, the principal one being St. Mary le Bow, so called from its great vault or bow, on the south side. On the south side also was the stone gallery from which royalty reviewed the tournaments which were held here. There were two crosses in Chepe, the principal one erected by Edward I to mark the resting place of his queen, Eleanor of Castile. The highway ran through the more southern portion of the marketplace, and became known as Cheapside. Before the fire in 1660 it was twice as wide as the present street, and was lined with houses five stories high, each story projecting over the one below, and with high gables. Cheapside is 59 feet above tide-water.

Penalty of Disuse.

Nature has a way of insisting that her gifts must be prized. "When she finds that we really do not care to use a thing, she usually takes it away from us," says a scientific writer. The unused muscular strength dwindles; the skill acquired by the fingers departs with disuse; a singer who sought to save her voice by refusing to sing except upon very rare and notable occasions, found to her surprise that through lack of exercise it was losing its power and sweetness.

This law of nature holds good in the world of the spirit. The generosity we put aside as too costly, the faithfulness and goodness we are going to put into life some other day, when we are not so busy, fade away. The faith and reverence that we fondly dream will flower into beauty sometime, are shrivelling into nothingness while we wait.

Patriot Mother of 1776.

The following may be of interest, copied from the Essex Gazette, September 21, 1775:

A gentleman who lately traveled through Connecticut met with an old gentleman who told him that she had fitted out and sent five sons and eleven grandsons to Boston when she heard of the engagement between the provincials and regulars. The gentleman asked her if she did not shed a tear on parting with them? "No," said she. "I never parted with them with more pleasure." "But suppose," said the gentleman, "they had all been killed?" "I had rather," said the noble matron, "this had been the case than that one of them had come back a coward."

Such was the spirit of 1776, and it is doubtful if this mother ever heard of Sparta.

The KITCHEN CABINET

Run, if you like, but try to keep your breath: Work like a man, but don't be worked to death.

SOME SUMMER MEATS.

HE perishable meats that are not needed for shipping to our army and allies, supply a sufficient variety to keep us from monotony. Among these are tongues, hearts, sweetbreads, kidneys, liver and brains, all good food when well and tastefully cooked.

Beef's Heart With Veal Stuffing.—Soak the heart three hours in cold water then remove the arteries and all bits of hard tissue. Take one pound of uncooked veal, chopped fine, a quarter of a pound of salt pork chopped fine, or the same amount of pork sausage, four tablespoonsful of bread crumbs, a tablespoonful of onion juice, one teaspoonful of salt, a quarter of a teaspoonful of pepper, one egg slightly beaten and a few fresh mushrooms, if they are obtainable. Mix all these ingredients together and stuff the heart. Wrap in a cloth and sew it. Stand in a small saucepan with the point down, cover with boiling water and just simmer very slowly for three hours, then remove the cloth and bake in a quick oven one hour, basting every ten minutes with a little sweet fat. Serve with a brown sauce, hot or cold. Heart is very nice, sliced and served cold.

Smoked Beef's Tongue.—Wash and soak the tongue over night. In the morning put on to cook in a kettle of cold water, simmer gently for four hours, or until it is perfectly tender. Add more water if needed. When the tongue is cold remove the skin. To serve as a hot dish, place on a heated platter well garnished with parsley to cover the roof end. What is left may be sliced and heated in a well-seasoned sauce, using such flavors and condiments as one's taste requires.

Sheep's Kidneys en Brochette.—Take six sheep's kidneys, cut through the center, remove the white veins and fat. Wash well, cover with boiling water and let stand five minutes, then wipe dry. Cut a fourth of a pound of bacon in slices half the size of the kidney, place on skewer a piece of kidney then a bacon, two pieces of kidney to each skewer. Place on a broiler, baste with fat and cook over a hot fire five minutes.

An Old Man's Stomach

As we grow older and less active, less and less food is required to meet the demands of our bodies. If too much is habitually taken, the stomach will rebel. When a man reaches the advanced age of 75 or 90, you will find that he is a tight eater. Be as careful as you will, however, you will occasionally eat more than you should and will feel the need of Chamberlain's Tablets to correct the disorder. These tablets do not contain poison, but strengthen the stomach and enable it to perform its functions naturally. They also cause a gentle movement of the bowels.
